Chauvet cave: The most accurate timeline yet of who used the cave

Slowly but surely, the mysterious and haunting Chauvet cave is giving up its secrets.

The cave, declared a UNESCO World Heritage site two years ago, was discovered in the south of France in 1994. Before the three spelunkers found the cave in December that year, scientists believed, no human had stepped foot inside for more than 27,000 years.

Studies have shown that many of the ancient and beautifully preserved prehistoric paintings of horses, cave lions and rhinoceros on the cave’s walls were made more than 30,000 years ago, making them some of the oldest known artworks on the planet.

Now, scientists have assembled more than 250 radiocarbon dates made from rock art samples, animal bones and the remains of charred wood used by humans scattered on the ground to create the most accurate timeline yet of who used the cave and when.
