For the purposes of this study, teachers in a public school setting in Grades K-5 across four different school settings, with larger sample sizes, employing the same research techniques as outlined by Spooner et al., (2007) and Courey et al., (2013). The research should be centered on the training and how it relates to transfer of learning to the classroom environment.