Bradshaw’s Four Principles for Culturally Responsive EI Services

1. Examine their own cultural values and beliefs and recognize how these affect their perceptions and interactions with families.

2. Explore and acquire knowledge of the cultures of the families they serve so that can effective match interventions and strategies to family priorities and needs.

3. Implement strategies that reflect culturally responsive practices to meet the needs of the families.

4. Take time to continually reflect on their practices to evaluate the effectiveness and ensure they are being culturally responsive.

Cultural humility involves an ongoing process of self-exploration and self-critique combined with a willingness to learn from others. It means entering a relationship with another person with the intention of honoring their beliefs, customs, and beliefs.
