Let’s fight for a healthier internet through advocacy, campaigns, policy, research and global dialogue about what can be done.
Let’s build a safer, better, and more open internet.
Together, we develop browsers, open source code, and developer tools.
Let’s imagine a healthier future for the web, through dialogue on openness and diversity, innovative business models, and support for software that serves the public interest.
Let’s enable the internet understand all languages, however big or small, through truly open voice technology that serves the public interest rather than merely profit.
