Best resources for minority and underserved health resources:

- MedlinePlus is # 1 (because of authoritative Spanish-language and multilingual materials)
- NLM, NIH, and other government health-related websites (such as healthfinder.gov, cdc.gov, cancer.gov, and etc)
- Local CHNAs (Community Health Needs Assessments) which are excellent resources for learning about the demographics and languages spoken, local health organizations, the major health issues and needs, and what is/can be done to address the health needs in the community.
- Outreach is more effective if there is cultural humility/competence, understanding, and involvement in the community itself.
- Partnering with community organizations is a great way to reach underserved populations that might not typically use the library.
