SSJX: STUDENT SOCIAL JUSTICE EXHIBITS

Claire Sharifi and Carol Spector
Gleeson Library | Geschke Center
University of San Francisco
SSJX: Student Social Justice Exhibits
The Concept

- Peer to peer learning
- Social justice theme, in line with the library and university mission
- Student driven topics
- Deeper exploration of library resources
- Partnership with librarians
- As part of a class assignment, individual project, or student group service project
SSJX: Student Social Justice Exhibits
The Displays

WOMEN’S REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS

SEXTRAFFICKING
Gleeson Gleanings: News & Updates from Gleeson Library | Geschke Center, USF

DISPLAYS AND EXHIBITS, GLEESON LIBRARY

WOMEN’S REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS DISPLAY

© MARCH 17, 2017  CAROL SPECTOR  LEAVE A COMMENT

Are you excited about Women’s History Month? Are you passionate about women’s reproductive rights? Then we’ve got a display for you! For the week of March 20th, we’ll be presenting a display in the library about female reproductive rights. This library display is a project for our awesome service learning Female Biology class. We’re weaving in both educational facts and social awareness in our display. The topics we touched on in our
SSJX: Student Social Justice Exhibits
Lesson Learned

- Work in collaboration with students to identify topics
- Take an active roll in identifying library resources
- Reach out to student groups
- Capitalize on student interest in displays