Perspectives On Discrimination And Health
Faculty Advisor: Ameena Batada

We all know that discrimination is detrimental to individuals, families, and society. However, the extent to which discrimination plays a role in contributing to negative health may be underestimated. This exhibit of 13 interactive posters and other displays highlight research on the various types and levels of discrimination and the health impact that experiencing and perceiving discrimination can have on the body, mind, and emotion. Explore topics such as implicit bias, school and workplace discrimination, health literacy, police brutality, urban renewal, and intergenerational trauma, and several others through this exhibit.

Students:

Adriana Alvarez
Rayna Armitage
Marlee Arteta
Hayette Bouras
Taylor Buchanan
Courtney Coules
Rachel Drake
Camille Gossett
Desiree Grubb
Shannon Herlihy
Amanda Heuermann-Thomas
Aaron Hill
Sarah Hiller
Anniina Hirvonen
Anna Long
Anina McCrae
Jeri Owens
Kelley Petroski
Jocelin Rosas
Sita Schussler
Lydia Senghas
Mikayla Spellacy
Kiersten Thiel
Audrey Thomas
Abby Turpen
Kelsey Vickrey