Five Senses Writing

Preparation:

• Copy one writing page per student.

Suggestions for use:

• These five senses writing pages are perfect for many units of study. They are ideal for use when students are writing about things they have cooked or eaten at school. For example, we make applesauce in the fall and write about it!

• These pages can also be used for a sensory study as the seasons change. Take your class on a walk outside and have them think about each of the five senses. Then, come inside and write about what they saw/felt/smelled/etc.

• To complete the page, students brainstorm ideas for each of the five senses and write them to finish the sentence.

• I have included pages with and without handwriting lines, and with and without sentence starters, to help you differentiate for your students as they progress throughout the school year.
• Example for applesauce:
  ■ I see small bits of apple and cinnamon.
  ■ I hear the sound of the knife chopping the apple.
  ■ I smell the sweet smell of the apple and the spicy cinnamon.
  ■ I touch the sticky juice of the apple.
  ■ I taste the delicious applesauce that we made together!
